Three years ago, Paul deMarris began a project to make his own line of oil sticks (oil paint in a stick form) made of walnut oil, dry artist pigments and a special kind of natural wax. His plan was to create oil paintings with the pastel painting. Join him as he instructs participants in the tricks he has learned on his journey. Unlike traditional oil paints in a tube, you won't have to deal with solvents, rags, cleaners and a mountain of gear and technical jargon. He'll demonstrate how to layer color and how to use an embossing heat gun to aid in blending and for other great effects. All supplies are provided.
